The IX-SOFT software transforms computers into intuitive, feature-rich intercom systems

Redmond, Wash. – August 4, 2020 – Aiphone, the leading international manufacturer of intercom and security communication products, is introducing its IX Series PC Master Station Software. The new IX-SOFT is capable of transforming any computer into a feature-rich intercom, with an easy-to-use and intuitive interface.

This PC-based intercom solution is ideal for any customer type, as it fits into everyday scenarios with ease. Whether the need is for the management of intercom solutions in small to mid-sized educational facilities and offices, or the more complex needs of an enterprise-level facility. This solution can be managed remotely by facility managers, or by a security operations center.

“The new IX Series software offers users the ability to easily add IP-based intercom locations where they originally didn’t have space for a physical master station,” said Brad Kamcheff, marketing manager, Aiphone. “This easy, compact solution offers customers the feature-rich benefits of an intercom system, accessible from any PC, in a versatile package.”

Features and benefits of the IX Series PC Master Station Software include:

- An interactive map that is a visually efficient way of selecting stations
- Device Check and Line Supervision ensure the system will operate as expected
- Video conversations can be easily recorded
- Computer screen offers larger viewing platform
- Better utilization of monitoring station space

The interactive map offers a visual layout that allows operators to immediately detect where a call originated and efficiently dispatch security personnel. For those with limited space to deploy a security master station, this solution is ideal for deploying an enterprise-level system in a compact package. The IX Series will also eliminate the need for operators to perform manual audits, as the process will now be done with the software – ensuring all products are functioning properly and connected to the network.
